I want to really like this game. I really, really, do. I want to love it and squeeze it and never let go. Instead, I find myself thinking that the quit button is a more and more appealing option as I hear the same song loop over and over again and struggle to find enjoyment with Offspring Fling's basic and short bursts of puzzle platforming.. A solid puzzle platformer that's good for short sessions.

The mechanics are interesting and the theme is cute.. This game is super cute. It starts off easy, but quickly gets more challenging. You might want to mute the music after awhile because it gets a bit annoying, but overall I like it. It's cute and quirky.. A charming child-throwing puzzle platformer that's challenging when attempting to beat the developer's level times.. This game is really not worth the $7.99 asking price. You can breeze through the entire game in about 3 hours if you're going for a gold flower on each level and a few more minutes if you want to beat the 10 postgame levels.

Apparently, there are 10 more levels you can unlock past that, but it requires beating the staff times for the initial 110 levels. And honestly, I don't think that would be worth the trouble. Wrestling with the game's slippery controls to get the initial 100 gold flowers was already infuriating.

If you're looking for a difficult platformer with much tighter controls, I'd recommend Super Meat Boy. And if you want a puzzle platformer with some more content, give Toki Tori a try. Really, anything but this game.. Charming puzzle-platformer. Minimalist mechanics combine to give some surprisingly varied gameplay. Speed runs will teach you a lot about economy of motion.. Even being a simple puzzle platformer, this game is aesthetically pleasant and have pretty good mechanics, so is a very nice game for when you're not in the AAA mood :D

Amazing and overlooked platformer/puzzle game (heavily oriented on the execution rather than the puzzle solving). Great art and music too.

Just beating the game is easy and takes roughly 2 hours, but that's only when the most interesting side of the game begins. Mastering all the movement techs and improving your times to unlock the late game content takes quite a bit of effort, and beating the last stages feels really rewarding. If you like games like Super Meat Boy, the completionist side of Offspring Fling! will definitely interest you.. This game is great and challenging the game is very strange idea as a puzzle game throwing your children. and beating a stage just feels great, but there is not much replay ability except to beat your time and get achievements. Plus the boss fight at the end is a joke.. Throwing babies, Americas number #38 pass time.. Offspring Fling is a puzzle game, you play as this ungodly adorable fuzzball who has lost her children to some dinosaur thing and you must go save them while traversing puzzles and what not. Styled after SNES games and unholy levels of difficulty you get to throw your very resilient offspring around to take on enemys, finish puzzles and to get them to the exit. You can stack them up and carry them, but it slows you down and you can't jump as high. Though keep in mind, if you loose one of those adorable little fuzzball offspring thingys, it's game over, you go back and restart the level, so... it can get annoying at times. Awesome game, support this developer!. A very cute, very retro indie puzzle game. The music is pretty good too. Lasts about 2 hours, 4-5 if you try to 100% it. Recommended at the 5 dollar or less price point.
